The Constitution
For Workers, Not Roads
German Indemnity
Ireland Understands It
By Arthur Brisbane

The Supreme Court of the United States decides that Victor Berger was illegally convicted and reverses the decision against him.

The Supreme Court takes seriously a section of the Constitution that guarantees freedom of speech and opinion. Many courts and many juries dropped that part of the Constitution for a while.

With news of Berger's decision it is announced that Debs is to stay in prison, by the President's decision, although the Attorney General's office advised his release. That decision will probably be overturned before long. Speech and opinions are often foolish. Sometimes they are harmful, and temporary interference based on straining the law a little seems wise. But when the speech and reason for ignoring the law are past, illegal decisions should be revoked. That will happen in Debs' case, if he lives.

Railroads say workmen's wages must be cut. They must return to the rate of wages prevailing before the recent increases. Nothing is said about returning to the railroad freight rates and passenger rates that prevailed before the recent increases. Nothing is said about controlling the coal trust that has robbed the public of over one billion a year, and has robbed the railroads of heaven knows how much, with the connivance of railroad officials.

The corporation system is shown in the street railway system at Albany, capital of New York State, where they increase railroad fares 60 per cent, and cut workmen's wages 25 per cent, in the same twenty-four hours. It remains to be seen whether that can be extended to the railroads of the country. It depends on the German indemnity. That would take more than a billion every year, in gold, and give it to the Allies, which attracts the world's attention.

Among all the nations, Ireland is best able to understand what Germany's situation will be for the next half century. What France and England will do to Germany from now on, Irish landlords, living in England, have done in Ireland for long years past.

Irish tenants were in the hands of mercenary recruiting agents, and every shilling they could get out of the half-starved and impoverished Irish population was sent over to be spent in England.

Until recent years, when England's land-holding system for Ireland began, the load of the Irish people was infinitely heavier than that now laid upon Germany by the victorious Allies.

Long ago when the United States went into the war, it was pointed out in this column that the steel business of America must be protected from foreign competition after the war or go to pieces. All Europe having specialized in steel production, would swamp our industry.

At this moment European steel is urgently offered in this country at cut rates. Our high freight rates and the low ocean freights, thus it costs to carry a few hundred miles on American railroads, complicates the situation. If the United States is to stay in the steel business something will have to be done. This interests directly some millions of stockholders and a significant industry.

The Anti-Saloon League reports great morality among agents hired to enforce prohibition. The death rate is higher than that in the World War.

This is not surprising, for whiskey, as everybody knows, is the most efficient of fighters. It may comfort the prohibition agents, however, to know that among those that drink the whiskey distributed today, the death rate is surely higher even than among prohibition agents.

OIL THROWN ON FIRE CAUSES DEATH

Clothing of Two Men Ignited by Flaming Oil Burned

Two men are dying from burns, a police officer who carried the men separately to the hospital is suffering severe burns, and a woman who fell and broke her leg during the excitement is in a precarious condition, all as a result of an explosion of kerosene and a fire at No. 29 Porter street, East Boston, early today.

The three men and woman are at the East Boston Relief station. Salvatore Pullano, fifty-four years old, and Salvatore Vassallo, fifty-six years old, the occupants of the Porter street house, were killed.

Wilson to Be Asking Pardon, Says Debs

By International News Service. ALBANY, Ga., Feb. 1.—Wilson will be asking the American people to pardon him for the balance of his days, was the comment of Eugene Debs, when told that President Wilson had denied Attorney-General Palmer's recommendation that the Socialist leader be set free on February 11.

"I do not expect favorable action from him," Debs said. "This will not free him. My spirit is as great as when I entered here. I shall not die in prison. I have made my mind to live and I can stay here as long as necessary."

Four Lose Lives; 6 Injured After Fast Freight Hits Cars on Siding

By International News Service. NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 1.—Four men were killed and six others injured when a fast freight train No. 344, running at twenty-five miles an hour, crashed into the rear end of a wreck train which was standing on a siding, at 4 o'clock this morning at John Street.

The crash of the collision caused the wreck train, which consisted of a tank car and four flat cars, to be thrown into the air and the engine of the freight train was crushed.

The four men who were killed were identified as William Williams, M. A. Pack, C. O. Bouch and John Simmer, all of Columbus.

WANTS OF HIGH COST OF LIVING BUILDING

Brigham Tells Chamber Com. Are Impossible

Testifying today before the special committee of the Chamber of Commerce investigating the housing shortage, Henry R. Brigham of the Massachusetts Housing Corporation declared that rents must be increased before building would commence.

Mr. Brigham, whose corporation is a private organization of builders, said that the only alternative was a reduction in the price of materials, but he saw no indication of that.

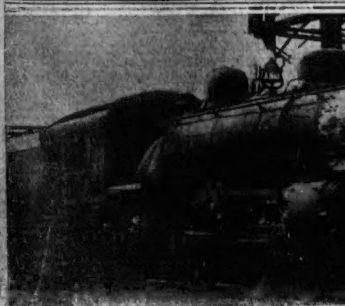

He added that after an exhaustive study of the housing situation, he believed it was out of the question to construct new housing.

CROWN PRINCE YEARS FOR HOME FARM

Realizes That Enmity of World
Prevents His Return to Germany

Rotterdam, Holland, Feb. 1.—"I wish I could return to Germany and devote myself to agriculture, especially to horse breeding," said the Crown Prince of Germany in an interview with a writer in the Dutch Weekblad on Feb. 1.

"How I should enjoy being in university circles in Bremen and among clever men, and be able to realize what I was obliged to miss during the war and here," he added.

FATHERLAND NEEDS REVEAL

"In other ways, too, I should like to put forth all my strength in assisting in the restoration of our poor fatherland. But I cannot. The many enemies I now have in the fatherland and in other countries would see my hand in every single action done by others, though in all probability I should not have had the slightest knowledge of it. That might result in confusion. My poor fatherland, however, requires rest to regain the position it has lost."

"As to the reason why my wife does not come to me, believe me she would very much like to come, for she knows that peace and happiness are not found up with hills, magnificent chandeliers and servants. On the contrary, she thinks of our children, whose education she has to look after."

BOYS STUDYING HARD

"Our sons must learn to be, later on, useful members of society. Wilhelm and Luitpold are attending the real gymnastics in Potsdam at present. Wilhelm wants to be an agriculturist, and will go to a high school for agriculture. Luitpold, however, more fitted to be a merchant. He would like to sail around the world on a German merchant vessel and learn the Spanish language."

"I have no objection if only they become useful men. They are studying hard and have sent me good reports of their progress."

"They have no time for amusements and sports. Of course they would really like to have a father's care, but that cannot be at present. You now see why my wife is obliged to remain in Germany. How would it be possible for us to educate our children here?"

CANNOT GO TO PATRONS

"I cannot go to my parents at Dornum. Our opponents still believe each of us capable of again setting the world afire. If we were together once more it would certainly mean in their eyes that the end of the world was only a question of time."

"Buy an estate here, you say? Where should I get the money from? I am poor and besides there is the low rate of exchange."

Harding at Famous Pirate Isle of Cocolobo

President-Elect Harding (on left) and Henry P. Fletcher, former ambassador to Mexico, spending a carefree hour on the links in Florida, just before his party started on a fishing trip to the island of Cocolobo, the favorite abode for centuries of the most daring pirates who sailed the Spanish Main.

Warren G. Harding has broken another precedent. For long years Cocolobo, the tiny sun-washed gem of the South Florida keys, was known only as the resort of pirates, freebooters and buccaners.

The list of those "great ones" included the names of Sir John Morgan, LaPille, Francis O'Connell, Michel Le Baron, Black Beard, and a host of other master thieves of the Spanish Main. That's where Mr. Harding and his friends are fishing today, just as the pirates of the Spanish Main fished in those bygone days when Denmark, Decatur, and Father La Hay ruled those seas by the terror of their names and the hot shot of their cannon.

Despatches from Miami, Fla., briefly to the fact that Cocolobo was once upon a time a favorite rendezvous of the buccaners, but they give no details. And yet the history of Cocolobo fairly glitters with the names of the pirates who sailed the Spanish Main, its gold and jewels and bloody deeds.

NEAR HAD WINDY STORM.
Next to Little Rock, Tabago, Jamaica and Antigua, no island of all the Antilles so replete with the memory of the great buccaners and their dear followers and imitators as Cocolobo.

It is one of the South Florida keys that spangle the blue waters of the Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico thereabouts. Since the fall of the buccaners Cocolobo has had a weird history. It was for a time the refuge of the Greek Indians and their allies, the

BORAH TO PUSH TARIFF BILL TO VOTE

Will Force Measure in Senate
Despite Action on Closure
Tomorrow

Washington, Feb. 1.—Hope for action on the Fordney emergency tariff bill before Congress adjourns was revived when Senator Borah announced that he will attempt to force the measure through the Senate regardless of the result of a closure vote tomorrow and the fate of the important government supply bills.

Closure was asked in a petition presented by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, after his motion to obtain unanimous consent for a vote on the tariff bill on February 15 had failed. The move was the last resort of the Republicans in pushing the bill.

If the closure failed, it was the intention to abandon the bill entirely and take other important legislation before the Senate, but the action of Senator Borah promises to prolong its consideration indefinitely or at least until a vote is obtained.

"Scottie" Missing, and Girl Owner Mourns

Suburbanites, please take notice: Have you recently been introduced to an exceptionally good-looking male collier, brown nose, golden-brown hair, black streak down his back and tail?

Calls Quality of Coal "Scandalous"

"The quality of the coal now being sold at $16 and $23 per ton is scandalous, and I have told the local dealers so," declared Malcolm E. Nichols, city fuel administrator, speaking to the Rules Committee at the State House.

"The people are being unfairly dealt with, and the authorities at Washington should be notified that Massachusetts is not satisfied with the coal delivered here."

BOLSHIEVKS THREATEN TO DESTROY FACTORY

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 1.—A threat that twenty Bolsheviks will destroy the Lincoln shoe factory here, if the plant, which has been closed two weeks is not reopened soon, has been made in a letter received by Mayor William Kimball. Admission of the fact was made by A. H. Lincoln, head of the firm of Lincoln, Tynd & Wilson.

Does he answer to the name of Scottie, and has he very small ears, all of them there?

Because if you have, there's more than just a slim chance you'll pick up a stray bill of $5 as a reward. The collier belongs to Miss Jerry Lorenz, student at the New England Conservatory of Music, who can be found at Juddville Hall, Boston 17, Buys Bay 1717.

Scottie strayed off October 27 and happened to be around the vicinity of Harvard and Commonwealth avenues at the time he developed the wanderlust. The collier is nearly a thoroughbred, two more generations to go, and is marked with a white tip on the end of his nose, brown small ears, and white breast and "short-front."

"Deliver unto her what belongs to her and gain happiness"—if you will, please.

Miss Lorenz expressed Scottie all the way from Chicago in order to make of the dog a true Bostonian, and—only to lose him after she had had him one month.

Why Many Women Have no Ap- petite For a Meal They Them- selves Have Cooked

Smoke and odor of cooking with lard

the other. This is another reason why Mazola is so much more economical. You can use it over and over again—until the last drop is gone.

Besides, these odors penetrate the house in a most disagreeable way. The cooking odors are even carried to the neighbors, causing embarrassment to the refined housekeeper, and much annoyance to the neighbors.

For these reasons millions of modern housewives never think of using anything but Mazola for frying, cooking, sautéing; and as a wonderful shortening for pie-crusts and biscuits.

Cooking Odors Prevented
by Modern Methods

Modern housewives are almost entirely overcoming this. They use Mazola—the New American Salad and Cooking Oil—instead of old-fashioned lard and other animal fats.

Women who cook the new way sit down to the table when they have prepared the meal, and enjoy their food. Mazola doesn't smoke easily—it can be heated so hot without burning that it crusts over the surfaces of the food, and prevents the odors from arising. This keeps the odors and flavors in the food, making it richer, better tasting, more nutritious and digestible.

No Ban on Fish or Onions

You can fry fish or onions in Mazola, and the odor will hardly be noticeable in the next room.

So complete is this sealing effect, that even after you fry fish or onions in Mazola, you can use the same lot for shortening

The Health-Giving Salad
—with Mazola

Mazola is relished by the best judges of salad oil everywhere for its wonderful richness and purity. It equals in flavor the finest imported Italian olive oils—and at only about half the cost.

Many prefer it to the finest olive oil—as it blends more perfectly with other ingredients, making a firmer, smoother dressing, that keeps for weeks without separating.

Even girls who have but little experience in preparing dainty food have wonderful results with their Mazola Mayonnaise, and other Mazola salad dressings.

Mazola is sold in pint, quart, half-gallon and gallon cans. At all grocers.

CHAPTER ONE.
The Young Man Called Calvary, or, Calvary, Where His Apparition, And Mr. Pitt Thinks That His Biography Might After All Be Different.

I was when he asked the elevator boy which would be the first floor that Mr. Pitt first became aware of him perhaps because the small figure in his speaking voice was a thought out of the crowd. But as the elevator started to go up, he saw that the man was not alone. He saw a woman, a woman who was looking at him with a look of interest. He saw a woman who was looking at him with a look of interest. He saw a woman who was looking at him with a look of interest.

He was then a young man, a young man who was looking at him with a look of interest. He was then a young man, a young man who was looking at him with a look of interest. He was then a young man, a young man who was looking at him with a look of interest. He was then a young man, a young man who was looking at him with a look of interest. He was then a young man, a young man who was looking at him with a look of interest.

"Isn't Genius Fragile?"
"It was the trial that knocked him, and all he went through, isn't it?"
"Yes, naturally. He looks nervous, usually rather fragile."

Let me borrow the book, little. I want to read it again. I don't want to read it again. I don't want to read it again. I don't want to read it again. I don't want to read it again."

"Yes, but he had made pottery." Mr. Pitt knit his brows over this. Margie seemed to him to be a little bit of a puzzle. He seemed to him to be a little bit of a puzzle. He seemed to him to be a little bit of a puzzle. He seemed to him to be a little bit of a puzzle. He seemed to him to be a little bit of a puzzle.

"The engine stopped dead," explained Lyons. "It will take us half an hour at least to fix her and it's a long way to the city. I don't want to go to the city. I don't want to go to the city. I don't want to go to the city. I don't want to go to the city. I don't want to go to the city."

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

THAT discussion with Phoebe on Dreamland that it was fully before I made my explanation to Virginia and started for the drive home. Virginia, with all the good-will in the world toward two youngsters who wanted to see her, was displaying a will to oppose the proposition. Phoebe, I had made to Father Andrew, Virginia had bulldozed Phoebe a bit at first. Then she had shifted her attack and had made the clever and insidious suggestion that Virginia might be over-ruled by too long a wait. This threatened to outmaneuver Phoebe's plan to go home. If Phoebe won, Neal over—and all his anger with Phoebe would be on her side—that was my duty.

"It was a very simple and I couldn't think my way out. The only thing to do was to talk it over with Jim, to whom I had told the story. As I arrived at this conclusion the car came to an abrupt stop. A moment later Lyons appeared, bringing my yard, garden, man. Wouldn't he have had it happen for anything, as it won't let us make love by dinner time at all."

"The delay was just about as Lyons had foretold. It was all of half-past six when we reached a little inn, and I put through the call for Jim's office. It was reported as not answering, so I asked no delay but telephoned Hedwig that I couldn't be home until seven-thirty or a bit later. Then she said she was again, streaking the night through the darkness."

The Craze for Orchids
THE widespread liking for orchids is evidenced by the fact that a century ago only 300 species were known, and those very imperfectly. Now the latest authority gives the number of known species at 10,000.

Want to grow bigger," he said.

Little Jack Horner and Bond Bread

NAMES of kings and emperors die, but little Jack Horner goes on and on. And why?

Because mothers know that Mother Goose is wholesome mental food for boys and girls. For the same reason Bond Bread goes marching ahead.

MOTHERS helped design it, sending their own wholesome, homemade leaves as a pattern and a standard. They have learned to look for our Bond on the wax paper on each loaf, guaranteeing the health-giving purity of every ingredient.

FROM this Bond, Bond Bread takes its name.

In home after home, boys and girls—and little Jack Horner—and good Bond Bread—finish the day, and tumble away into dream-land together.
